

Call for Hosting

emma Doctoral Summer School 2023

The emma Board welcomes applications to host its bi-annual Doctoral Summer School in 2023. The Summer School usually lasts between three and five days and provides a supportive and international setting in which doctoral researchers in the field of media management can exchange knowledge with peers, senior scholars and potentially industry delegates. By presenting and discussing their PhD research projects, participants can further develop their understanding of the respective subject matter, the wider scholarship and the practical context of the media industries.

Another aim of the Summer School is to help young researchers to improve their presentation and writing skills. Additionally, it provides an ideal setting in which to network with other senior academics in the field.

For further information you can access and download a previous Summer School report here.

Application Requirements

The following elements should be addressed in your application so the Board will have a clear sense of your organisation, the venue, the ideas you have in mind, and why you believe having the Doctoral Summer School in your location would be beneficial to PhD candidates. The Board decides the location for each Summer School on a competitive comparison of all applications received. Your application should provide:

- A covering letter explaining the motivation of your institution for hosting the Summer School and summarising the strengths of your candidacy.
- An endorsement by the administrators of your university, school or department indicating institutional support for hosting the event. Sources of financial investment should be discussed, although registration fees, sponsorship and potential Association support are also involved.
- Members of the onsite committee. Specify their names, affiliations and positions. If you already know, please also indicate their committee roles.
- A proposed date for the Summer School. The Association is flexible about the calendar period but would prefer it to happen between June and September. It's important to ensure that the dates you propose will not conflict with other important conferences.
- A description of the institution's ability to provide professional organisation and planning support with a description of the venue and rooms (capacity, location, facilities).
- A description of the benefits of the proposed location.

- A description of accommodation options.
- A breakdown of expected costs and revenues.
- Social events and related highlights that make the location attractive.

Application Date

We look forward to receiving your application and appreciate the effort it takes to produce a good one. Please send your application to emma Secretary Dinara Tokbaeva (dinara.tokbaeva@ju.se) by 1st April 2022.

You may also consult one of our Board members prior the writing of your application. Once we have received your application, you will receive feedback by the Board no later than two months after the submission.
